“ Andy and I were riding our dirt bikes up to Beehive reservoir in '91 or '92. While riding side by side on a curve he went down, and I ran over his shoulder with my front wheel. It happened so fast. Andy just brushed himself off and we continued riding. He was strong as a bull and his big shoulders weren't fazed a bit. Luckily I was able to miss him w/my rear wheel, but he was really a gentle giant. No one at the group home would dare challenge him physically and with good reason, but Andy would be the first to de-escalate any situation. Andy was well intentioned and a good guy.
